Our Schools.

The opening of the schools yesterday was exceedingly gratifying to the several promoters of these enterprises. The number of pupils in attendance was generally larger than expected on the first day and particularly amid the extremely hot weather we are enduring.

Goodwin's High School opened with 15 students in their desks, and he will have his full number (30) by next week.

Emerson Institute opened with 35 girls, and the principal is in good spirits about the success of her work.

Miss Rannie Burroughs' school opened with more flattering prospects than ever in its history; 88 pupils were enrolled, and she has her school so well graded that in a day or two all will be running as smooth as if the school had been in operation a year. Miss Rannie is a success in her work, and no amount of hard work deters her from giving her pupils all the attention needed.

The K. T. S. opened fifty per cent. above what the opening was last year. Many new pupils have come in from both home and distant points.

Maj. Fowler has employed a splendid corps of teachers both for the K. T. S. and Harris Institute, and, as he always has done, will give those entrusted to his care the most efficient teaching possible. Over 50 pupils greeted the Major on the opening day, which was a gratifying surprise. Every train is bringing in others. The enrollment this year will be up to and above that of any previous year in the history of the school.

Miss Duty's school opened with 15 pupils, and she has assurances of all she can accommodate.

Miss Chenaault's school opens tomorrow.

The City Graded school will begin Monday next, September 10.

It is our pleasant duty to announce to the readers of the ADVOCATE the coming of Miss M. Courtland Prentice Chenaault, one of the most brilliant young lawyers at our bar, and Miss May Hocker (Hazzard), the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Judge Jas. H. Hazzard, of the Appellate Court.

This wedding, which is to take place Thursday, September 6, at the Christian Church in this city, has caused a great deal of commotion among our young people on account of both parties being so well known and liked here. Miss Hocker is one of the sweetest and most accomplished, and at the same time one of the most popular young ladies in our city, and has been the cause of much pleasure to meet. We have known her nearly her whole life, and from childhood up to the present time she has always been the same sweet Christian girl, and in winning her Mr. Chenaault has won one of the grand prizes in the lottery of life. Of Mr. Chenaault we have to say he is "a Christian and a gentleman," and in those four words we have said more than we could in whole volumes. He is the junior partner of the law firm of Woodford & Chenaault, and although one of the youngest attorneys in this district, already has a large and growing practice and we predict for him a brilliant and successful future. Courtland has a host of friends throughout Kentucky, and as far as we know not a single enemy. He is a man whom any woman should be proud to call husband.

Young people, we tender to you our sincerest regards and wish you a happy and prosperous journey down the highway of life in the gilded chariot of pleasure.

In speaking of the wedding the Lexington Transcript says: "Miss Hazzard is the daughter of Judge Jas. H. Hazzard, of the Court of Appeals, and is quite a social favorite in this city, where she has many relatives and friends."

There will be a concert given at Howard's Mill Thursday night in the interest of the Sunday-school library. It will be a rather an old-fashioned concert. No musical instruments will be used. Good singing and recitations will be rendered. It will be an enjoyable affair to all who attend, both old and young. Under the direction of F. F. Dawson. Concert will begin promptly at 7:45 p. m.

Silver Wedding.

For twenty-five years Peter Greenwood and wife have walked together down life's rugged path. In adversity and prosperity they have been the same congenial two and have gotten out of life all the happiness in store for them, and on last Friday, August 31, in commemoration of their twenty-fifth anniversary they celebrated their silver wedding. A host of friends were present and numerous were the gifts. The dinner was a most delightful spread and the two were as happy as they were twenty-five years ago when Miss Mollie Ramey became the bride of Peter Greenwood. May their lives be together many, many years and be crowned with blessings not a few.

Died, on Sunday morning, September 2, 1894, L. D. Wilson, aged 75 years.

For some time past Mr. Wilson has been in failing health and the tottering old remnant of his once stalwart frame was not an unusual sight, as the old man who knew everyone and was liked by old and young, was seen making his uneasy way along the street. Uncle Dud was for many, many years a member of the Methodist Church. He loved his service and herons and the old paths and achievements of his church in the day when the "circuit rider" was in the land. Uncle Dud was a benevolent man, but not in an ostentatious way. He never thrust his charities before the public gaze. He was in a large sense a grateful man. He never forgot a kindness done him. Only yesterday a life-long friend said of him: "Dudley never tired of wanting to do me a kindness and to show me accommodations because of some kindness my father had shown to his mother when she was a widow with small children dependent upon her." Uncle Dudley was a successful business man and was long identified with the business interests of this town. His wife, the well-beloved Eliza, preceded him to the beyond by several years, and since then Uncle Dud's chief wish has been to join her. His desire has been gratified; and yesterday afternoon he was laid to rest by her side in our beautiful Macksville.

On the 15th of this month the Republicans of this county will meet in convention to name a county ticket. Ed. C. Orear is spoken of for County Judge, G. L. Kirkpatrick for County Clerk, and others too numerous for the other offices. It is claimed by the Republicans that the two named gentlemen would either make a very close fight or would win. We would be glad to see the Republicans name their best men, but they have no chance for preferment in this county. It is true that Mr. Orear is a good lawyer, but he is no better than Mr. A. B. White, nor will he ever be. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a good business man and would be a good County Clerk if he had an opportunity, but he is no better business man than Mr. Lucien Greene, could not make a better Clerk and will never have an opportunity in this county to show us his correctness or penmanship. The fact is no Democratic county in Kentucky has any spoils for Republicans.

R. C. Lloyd, proprietor of the City Drug Store, has rented the handsome store-room of Mr. T. F. Rogers, on Mayville street, and will move to his new place of business October 1. Mr. Rogers is having some substantial improvements made in the already commodious and well arranged store-room. Mr. Lloyd's business has so grown on him, even amid the close times of the past year, that he is compelled to seek larger quarters to accommodate his increased trade.

In Clark county last Thursday, John King, a Breckinridge admirer, and George Cook, an enthusiast for Lewis, two friends, met and talked politics. They both got warm and finally Cook made the statement that any woman who would go to hear Breckinridge speak was no better than the lowest of women, and this said, both men dismounted and went to carrying each other with their pocket knives, and in a very short time Cook was out to death.

DEATH MOST

FEARFUL!

Six Towns of Minnesota Destroyed by Fire.

The Loss of Life Will Reach Into the Hundreds.

Over Three Hundred and Fifty People Reported Dead.

And the List May Reach Five Hundred.

St. Paul, Sept. 2.—Six towns between St. Paul and Duluth wiped out and more than five hundred dead is the record made by the forest fires in this State in the last twenty-four hours. Minnesota has never known a calamity attended with such a loss of life as that brought by the fire which destroyed Hinckley, Mission Creek, Sandstone, Sandstone Junction, Pokeama, Skunk Lake and the other settlements in that vicinity.

A conservative estimate places the loss of life at not less than 355, while many others have sustained serious injuries and unknown others are among the missing, while from 150 to 200 people were scattered on farms throughout the district burned over. One report gives the estimate of the losses of life at Hinckley and other places:

Hinckley, 200.
Sandstone, 46.
Sandstone Junction, 25.
Pokeama, 25.
Skunk Lake, 29.
Miscellaneous, 30.
Total, 350.

To this horror of death in its worst form must be added the utter desolation and destitution that have come upon thousands of others whose all has been swept away in the face of impending winter. There is a peculiar horror about the fatality in the admitted impossibility of identification of a large proportion of the corpses.

The destruction was complete in most of the towns named, but some of the forest land escaped. The loss, however, will be in the millions and the loss of life will not be definitely known for several days, if ever.

Sot and Julia Aiken, who made such a decided hit in Havill's "A Pair of Jacks" Co., will entertain at the Grand Opera House on Friday evening, Sept. 7th, in Miller & Comfort's farce comedy, "Silver Wedding," one of the funniest plays that has ever been produced, and will be presented by a great cast of singing and dancing comedians.

Judge J. W. Groves bought of Mrs. J. L. Branner, a lot 58x241 feet, for $650, and has begun the erection of a beautiful cottage home.

11 COURT PLACE
Mt. Sterling, Ky.

Mt. Sterling Club Disbands.

On last Saturday night Manager Chiles settled with his men and gave them their release. This means that the season for the national sport at this place has ceased until another year. We are sorry to learn of this as the game at this period of the base-ball season is more largely attended and more enjoyable than at any time during the year. Manager Chiles expressed himself as being satisfied with the result of his labor during the brief time the club was under his management, and says his success, financially, is due to the liberal patronage his club received from the people of this city, for which he wishes to extend his thanks.

We will not give notice of the games the past week, as the people most interested are fully acquainted with the facts, but we will venture to remark that if disagreeable dissemination among the players had not grown to an ludicrous stage, we are confident that Manager Chiles would have carried the club a month or so longer. But it is all over now, and "the mill will never grind again with the water that has passed."

Of ball players who use their tongues more than their talents in a game of ball, Mr. Joe Quinn, of base-ball fame, has this to say: "The players who use vulgar or profane language or act the rowdy or bully during a game, have not sense enough to see that such practices affect the patronage, and consequently their own reputation. There is no penalty too severe for such offenses, and if the clubs won't discipline players who make these breaks the manager should. The better class of players condemn hoodlumism. The umpire should be instructed to promptly fine any player who swears or uses vile language during the game, and if the offense is repeated the player who persists should be run out of the game. The foul-mouthed player does the profession as much, if not more, harm as the dirty ball player. People will not patronize the sport if they are compelled to listen to the language of swill-headed tongues."

The article in the Montgomery Times of September 1, commenting on base-ball, makes a bad matter worse. The writer reminds us very much of the man who saw any number of tigers in India, but never met a solitary missionary during his two years sojourn in that country. The fact is, we generally find what we are looking for whether in India or Kentucky. The assertion that the national game would be "as lifeless as a last year's bird's nest with the betting left out," is simply ridiculous. The largest and most excitable crowd that has been the last game between Paris and Mt. Sterling. There were present 600 people, and the betting contingent did not number fifty, all told. We have our pro rata of gamblers, but they do not, as seems to have been intimated, constitute the bulk of our population, or are they by any means the only class who patronize or who are interested in outdoor sports.

The sale of short-horn cattle by Mr. George Hamilton which was to have been last week was postponed until the 17th on account of sickness in his family.

Mr. Kendig, of Penn., was here Monday and purchased a car load of mules colts, for which he paid from $20 to $30 per head.

SMITHVILLE SUFFERS,

Two Small Fires in Two Days.

Saturday at noon an alarm was sounded and it was discovered that there was a small blaze in Smithville, a negro suburb. Three dwellings were burned to the ground and a fourth very seriously injured as a result of the fire. Two of the burned dwellings were owned by Harrett Smith and the third by Martin Jones. George Moore owned the injured dwelling. This fire originated from a defective flue.

Monday morning about 5 o'clock, a fire was discovered in the same district, and Henry Bondurant and Tom Tipton each lost a dwelling. This time the fire originated from an exploding coal oil lamp. The entire property was owned by colored parties, and the loss, whilst not very large, falls very heavy on those who are ill prepared to bear it.

Circuit Court.

The September term of the Montgomery Circuit Court began yesterday with Judge John E. Cooper on the bench. The only business discharged was the empaneling and charging of the Grand Jury, after which the court was adjourned till this morning, yesterday being Labor Day.

Sterling, Ky., on Friday and Saturday, 7th and 8th inst., prepared to adjust glasses properly to all forms of defective vision. Mr. James McWilliams, a theological student at Danville Seminary, preached an excellent sermon at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning. Mr. McWilliams is a former Mt. His many friends here join in wishing him the choicest blessings in his chosen profession.

Miss Mayme Taylor, who will be remembered as one of the leading sopranos of the Marie Greenwood Opera Company, is now with Miller & Comfort's "Silver Wedding" Company, to be presented at the Grand Opera House on Friday, Sept. 7th. The Silver Wedding is one of the funniest farce comedies ever seen in this city.

Scalded.

Mary Lyle one of Bruce Duty's twins met with a very painful accident last Saturday. Her mother had entered her room with a bucket of boiling water and the child who had hid from her ran from his hiding place and caught it in the face and the water poured out on its face and side scalding it to death severely from half the face to its waist. At present it is resting easy and will soon be well.

THE ADVOCATE.

Stock Notes.

The work horses in hot weather should be watered between morning and noon, and at least once between noon and quitting time.

Reports from Portland, Oregon, say that a company has been formed in that city for the purpose of slaughtering the cheap horses in the Northwest.

A writer thinks the best breed of hogs is the breed which help themselves the most, cost the least and furnish the most good meat at the lowest cost.

Let the pigs pick up the inferior apples that fall in the orchard. Besides getting the benefit of fruit that would otherwise go to waste, the pigs would destroy a great many insects.

It is reported that Texas railroads are making consignors of sheep pay the freight in advance to insure against loss, should the price received at the destination not be sufficient to pay the freight bill.

One who has been successfully raising hogs thinks that a thoroughbred boar at 20 cents a pound is cheaper than a scrub at five cents. In fact he says that you can hardly put too much for a first class boar if you have much use for him.

A humane writer says: Keep the flies out of the stables. Close up the cracks and tack mosquito bar over the windows. This may cost you a little money and trouble but it will save you many dollars' worth of horse flesh. The horses will pay for it by doing lots more hard work without fatigue.

An exchange says: A few years ago the farmer sold his lambs and weathers to the "buyer." This man sold them to "feeders" and the feeders sold them to shippers and this enterprising class handed them over to the consumers. Today an occasional shepherd finds that he alone is to blame if he does not manage to rake in the profits from all three of these transactions.

Points on Shoeing.

An English veterinarian, while speaking of shoeing horses, said that the greatest care was necessary to shoe the horse that the relative position of the leg to the foot in their normal state should be maintained. The shoeing of the horse should be level all around. If shoeed so, the inside or the outside of the foot, were too high or too low, the relationship of the limb to the leg was disturbed—in fact the whole mechanism of the limb was thrown out of gear. Unequal pressure however slightly occasioned, would surely end in serious damage to the limb, and among the frequent results of such treatment is the permanent injury to the coffin bone. Contraction of the heel, he maintained, was not an active disease, but a passive condition due to the horse easing his feet so as to minimize the pain felt at his heels due to bad shoeing. He had little faith in mechanical arrangements for widening contracted heels. "Shoe the horse," he remarked, "so that the bearing surface is properly maintained at the heel, and expansion will follow as a natural consequence."

Prices of Pure Breeds.

The Western Swinehead says very truly that the price of the pure bred is a stumbling block to the farmer when he first considers pure blood; that it appeals him to be asked to pay from $15 to $40 for a pig no larger than those of his own herd that he could not market for more than $6 or $7. But no man can afford to sell a good breeding pig eligible to record for less than $15. The cost of production makes it impossible to do so. But the lesson that "blood will tell" has to be learned before breeding can be made profitable. A more pretentious to learn it by expensive experience and market rough, uneven and ill conditioned lots of hogs at cuts under market rates before they begin to inquire why a neighbor gets from 10 to 50 cents per hundred more for hogs than they do. The thoroughbred hog is capable of turning 300 pounds at eight months old, and more often than the scrub requires from four to eight months longer and double the amount of feed to reach the same weight. Fifteen dollars or even $20 per year spent for the best blood is a cheap investment for the farmer who turns off his 100 head of hogs annually.

Keep the wagons, buggies, cultivators, mowers, etc., well oiled, and see that they are under shelter when not in use.

GIVES HIS VIEWS

In a Letter to Catchings, of Mississippi.

Mr. Cleveland Tells Why He Didn't Sign.

He is Astonished at the Power of the Trusts.

But He is Hopeful of More Tariff Reform.

The President's letter to Mr. Catchings, of Mississippi, has been given out. It occasions a great deal of discussion. It is as follows:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., Aug. 27, 1894.—To Hon. T. Catchings—My Dear Sir: Since the conversation I had with you and Mr. Clark of Alabama, a few days ago, in regard to my action on the tariff bill now before me, I have given the subject further and more serious consideration. The result is I am more settled than ever to allow the bill to become a law without my signature. When the formulation of legislation, which it was hoped would embody Democratic ideas of tariff reform, was lately entered upon by congress, nothing was further from my anticipation than a result which I could not promptly and enthusiastically endorse. It is, therefore, with a feeling of the utmost disappointment that I submit to a denial of this privilege.

"I do not claim to be better than the majority of my party, nor do I wish to avoid the responsibility which, on account of the passage of this law, I ought to bear as a member of the Democratic organization, neither will I permit myself to be separated from my party to such an extent as might be implied by my veto of tariff legislation, which, though disappointing, is still chargeable to Democratic effort. But there are considerations in this bill which are not in line with honest tariff reform, and it contains inequities and crudities which ought not to appear in tariff laws or laws of any kind. Besides, there were, as you and I well know, incidents accompanying the passage of the bill through Congress which made every sincere reformer unhappy, while influences surrounded it in its later stages and its enforcement of its final construction, which ought not to be recognized or tolerated in Democratic tariff reform councils.

"And yet, notwithstanding all its vicissitudes and the bad treatment it received at the hands of pretended friends, it presents a vast improvement of existing conditions. It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people. It is not only a barrier against the return of mad protection, but it furnishes a vantage ground from which must be waged further aggressive operations against protection monopoly and governmental favoritism. I take my place with the rank and file of the Democratic party who believe a tariff reform and who know what it is, who refuse to accept the results embodied in this bill as the close of the war, who are not blinded to the fact that the liberty of Democratic tariff reform has been stolen and worn in the service of Republican protection and who have marked the places where the deadly blight of treason has haunted the councils of the brave in their hour of might.

"The trusts and their combinations—the communism of self-interest—these machinations have prevented us from reaching the success we deserve, should not be forgotten or forgiven. We shall recover from our astonishment at their exhibition of power, and if then the question is forced upon us, whether they shall submit to the free legislative will of the people's representatives, or shall dictate the laws which the people must obey, we will accept and resist that view as one involving the integrity and safety of American institutions. I love the principles of true Democracy because they are founded upon patriotism and upon justice and fairness toward all interests. I am proud of my party organization because it is conservatively sturdy and persistent in the enforcement of its principles. Therefore, I do not despair of the efforts made by the House of Representatives to supplement the bill already passed by further legislation, and to have engrained upon it such modifications as will more nearly meet Democratic hopes and aspirations.

"I can't be mistaken as to the necessity of free raw materials as the foundation of logical and sensible tariff reform. The extent to which this is recognized in the legislation already secured is one of the encouraging and reassuring features; but it is vexatious to recall that while free coal and iron ore have been decided, a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury discloses the fact that both might have been made free by the annual surrender of only about $700,000 of unnecessary revenue.

"I am sure that there is a common habit of underestimating the importance of free raw material in tariff legislation, and of regarding them as only related to concessions to be made to our manufacturers. The truth is, their influence is so far reaching that, if disregarded, a complete and beneficial scheme of tariff reform can not successfully be inaugurated.

"When we give to our manufacturers free raw materials we unshakably American enterprise and ingenuity, and these will open the doors of foreign markets to the reception of our wares and give opportunity for the continuous and remunerative employment of American labor. With materials cheapened by their freedom from tariff charges the cost of their product must be correspondingly cheapened. Thereupon justice and fairness to the consumer would demand that the manufacturers be obliged to submit to such a readjustment and modification of the tariff upon their finished goods as would secure to the people the benefit of the reduced cost manufacture against the exactions of inordinate profits.

"It will thus be seen that free raw materials and a just and fair regulation and reduction of tariff to meet the changed conditions would carry to every humble home in the land the blessings of increased comfort and cheerfulness.

"The millions of our countrymen who have fought bravely and well for tariff reform should be exhorted to continue the struggle, boldly challenging to open warfare and constantly guarding against treachery and half-heartedness in their own camp. "Tariff reform will not be settled until it is honestly and fairly settled in the interest and to the benefit of a patient and long suffering people. Yours very truly,

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

IS BARNES CRAZY.

Prof. McGarvey Seems to Think

He is, and Gives His History.

There is Nothing in the Bible to

Exonerate Colonel Breckin-

ridge's Awful Crime.

(Lexington Transcript.)

"At last our most prominent brother found to publicity advocate the re-election of Colonel Breckinridge, and to denounce the other preachers of this Congressional District for opposing his re-election on grounds of morality. George O. Barnes accords the motion of Francis Minkley. Mr. Minkley's case has been pretty freely discussed in the Paris papers; let us now see a, who is George O. Barnes? If he is a man of such accuracy and consistency in his teaching, that his judgment on a question demands respectful consideration at the hands of his fellow preachers, it is time for the rest of us to call a halt and to reconsider our utterances.

"Who, then, is George O. Barnes? When he first visited Lexington he was accredited as a Presbyterian preacher of some ability, but not of heterodox teaching. The next time, he had fallen out with the Presbyterian Church; he proclaimed himself atheist, and said that before his complete sanctification he had been a hypocrite, and that all the other preachers were still the same. Soon after this he commenced carrying around with him a bottle of oil, and telling on the people afflicted with any disease to come forward and let him anoint and heal them. At this time he taught that any man who would make the confession to him that he invited them, saying, 'I take Jesus to be my Savior the best I can,' would be certain of heaven, no matter what he might be at the time, or where he might live thereafter. He promised them that he would be damned in three or four places if that did not save them. Still later, after these two humbugs had played out, he quit anointing with oil, and said that every man must make his confession to God alone—that he would take their confessions no longer. Meantime, he carried around with him, over the mountains and everywhere, a little book, and declared that and all his joints the Lord by a special providence kept it in tune. He held aside his spectacles, and said the Lord would preserve his eyesight so that he could see without them. This experiment did not last long. He proclaimed that he then had faith enough to heal the sick, and that he would soon have enough to raise the dead.

After some years of a very notable career in Kentucky, he went to Indiana, and while there he had a revelation from the Lord to the effect that the English people are the ten lost tribes of Israel, and that Queen Victoria is the head of the true church. He immediately obtained membership in the Episcopal church, but that church, like the Presbyterian, refused to endorse his heresies by putting him into the ministry.

"On his return from Indiana he preached that 'God is love and nothing else.' He denounced his old-time doctrine that there is an eternal hell; said that hell was a temporary place in which sinners would have another chance, and that when he died he was going there to preach to them. He taught that the devil comes all the trouble in the world, all untimely frosts, all cyclones and all untimely rain. When he was preaching at Woodland, and a rain cloud came up, he cried out that the devil was bringing that rain to break up his audience. His glory had now departed. He could no longer obtain and hold the vast audiences that once assembled to hear him, and he soon left to make his home on a little island off the coast of Florida. What evil wind it is that has blown him back to his old stamping-ground is not explained in the papers; but we may rest easy under the knowledge that his power for evil, once very great in Kentucky, has come to naught. With such a 'comedy of errors' marking his past career, when he stands up in Lexington to tell the people that all of the preachers whom they have selected as their teachers in religion, are grossly perverting the teaching of Christ when they array it against the re-election of such a man as Breckinridge to Congress, the people know how to take him.

"The people not only know how to take anything that comes from Mr. Barnes, but they understand better than he does the passages of Scripture which he is said to have made use of in his sermon Sunday night. He comes in too late to say anything about David and Peter as parallels to Breckinridge, and the people know very well the fallacy of applying to political preachment the Savior's rule about the forgiveness of personal offenses. If Col. Breckinridge has offended any of them personally, and asks forgiveness, I suppose they will acknowledge the obligation to forgive, but after forgiving him, they will not see that they may vote for him rather than for a better man when they go to elect a representative in Congress. A man with half an eye left can see that. As for the case of a woman brought to Jesus by the Pharisees, her conduct was similar to that of Breckinridge, though not a hundredth part so bad, but there is no other likeness between the two. Under the law she was, and the man who was guilty with her was liable to death by stoning, and the power of the Pharisees was to induce Jesus to condemn her to death, so that they might report the fact to Pilate, and accuse him of assuming the prerogative of a king. When, therefore, he said to her, 'Neither do I condemn thee,' he meant that he did not condemn her to death—as one which would have been a usurpation of civil authority on his part. That he did not mean by condemn, the condemnation of her act as sinful, is seen in the words, 'Go, and sin no more.' Let me add, to correct a common mistake, that this interview between him and her did not effect her final fate in the least. It was still the solemn duty of the magistrates of the town, when the facts came to their knowledge, to have the woman tried, and, on conviction, to see that she was stoned to death; and inasmuch as the proceedings before Jesus made her case public, there can be no ground for doubt that she was condemned and executed. This is not all. The man who was guilty with this woman, though he had doubtless run away when the woman was caught, being able to outrun her and her pursuers, was not spared because he was a man. The Jews were in harmony with the provisions of their own God-given law on this subject, and most willingly stoned the man when they stoned the woman. If the man in this instance was not stoned it was because he could not be found.

Let it be known, once and forever, that there is nothing in God's Holy Book to exonerate the awful crimes proven against Breckinridge, and nothing to furnish an excuse to good people for seeking to re-elect him.

Dr. L. P. V. Williams, of Morehead, is a candidate for Railroad Commissioner, subject to the action of the Democratic party. We are personally acquainted with Dr. Williams, and it is with pleasure we commend his claims to his party. Born of Democratic parents, a careful student of policies, he is simple pure, honest, industrious and ambitious. He is just the kind of a man for the position to which he aspires. Already, before even the calling of a convention, he is being attacked by the Republicans, which is evidence that he is a strong man, and that he will prefer another. Dr. Williams informs us that he is in the race to the finish, and should he become the standard-bearer of his party the Republican candidate, it matters not who he may be, will be far away from the plun.

W. C. P. Breckinridge says he will support the nominee of his party. Very well, if his influence is as small in the Ashland district as it is at Washington, it will be of little weight and would be a hindrance of only one vote whether he did or not. If Owens, Settlemore, Breckinridge are good Democrats and they are so accepted and Breckinridge can vote for them and they cannot vote for him, there is something radically wrong in the life and character of Breckinridge. Kentucky surely does not want a man for Congress with a character as black and begrimed as Breckinridge would have the people believe him to be.

Joe Blackburn has called Senator Hill a miserable traitor, or a trifling cur. If Joe pulls some Senator's nose back to Washington, — Cynthia Democrat.

The Lesson of the Hour.

Hon. O. C. Bowles, of Pike county, has seen fit to surrender the life-long principles he has professed and go over to the Republican party. We are not inclined to question the sincerity of the change. We have seen no statement from the gentleman, but are informed he was led to the step by the "insincerity and half-heartedness" of the Democrats in Congress in fulfilling the pledges made to the people.

It is very true that the late struggle in Congress for tariff reform resulted in little better than a drawn battle so far as the Democrats are concerned. This, too, in the face of the fact that we had a majority in both Houses, and an Administration all pledged to bring about radical reforms in the tariff. A few traitors allied themselves with the enemy and boldly and blatantly stood across the path of all progress. It was the misfortune of the party to be sold out by these men. But it no more follows that the Democratic party is responsible for the traitorous actions of Gorman, Brice & Co., than it does that Thomas Jefferson should be held responsible for Aaron Burr's treasonable designs. This only becomes the time when Democrats should the more closely and determinately stand together. Thirty years ago when the boys were facing one another in a mighty struggle, and upon waking in the morning the news would spread over the camp that some traitor had deserted to the enemy, such only served to draw the ranks closer together and to give to the men a more iron resolve to be truer than ever to their colors. All good Democrats, who stop to think, will feel as the boys did in those ugly days of '64. They will recognize that instead of deserting the party to whose principles we have given our adherence, it only becomes the more plainly our duty to stand by them. The party has not accomplished all it desired or was pledged to do, but it is only because some of its pretended friends and adherents in the Senate found means to defeat the will of the people while they lined their pockets with the money of the protected industrial concerns. The fact that the power of the trusts is sufficient to purchase enough members in either House to defeat the will of the people, should be cause for the most serious alarm and serve to make all Democrats only the more determined to keep up the fight till these powerful enemies of the public will shall be brought to a proper understanding of their rightful place in the ongoings of the republic.

Read, McKinley and Harrison—these three each of them want to be the Republican nominee for the Presidency, and there will be a hard-fought battle between them. They would like to say they are for the people's interests, but the trusts and combines are their friends, and the people will not be deceived.

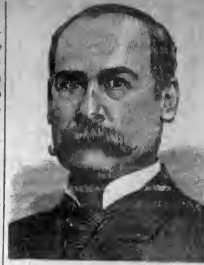

The women of the Ashland district will not be seen at the polls on the 15th inst., but they will do nothing through their committees. They will plead with their husbands, brothers and fathers to cast their votes so as to preserve the honor of their district. God bless the women!

One night last week some of the Bill Breckinridge kind in Richmond using the Hon. W. C. Owens in effigy and now since the Grand Jury has the matter in hand, like the miserable old wretch of whom they are followers, they are sorry.

President Cleveland is at Buzzard Bay, where he will remain until October, unless called to the Capital on important Administrative business.

"Willie" Breckinridge will address the people of Lexington next Friday evening, and wants the business men and working men to hear him.

The German Emperor, in spite of his lame and twisted arm, is an excellent horseman. His attendants have to help him into the saddle, but once there he can master any horse.

Col. Ion B. Nall.

Of Jefferson county, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Commissioner of Agriculture.

We have known Col. Nall from our youth up. He is a correct, palatable business man, raised on the farm, now editor of the Farmers Home Journal and has been for years, and is in touch with all agricultural interests. Search the State over and no better equipped man can be found than Col. Nall, and mark what we say, he will be hard to down.

It had been rumored that our esteemed countryman, W. M. Bridgeford, would be a candidate, but we have it from the "word of mouth" that he will not. He would have made a strong fight, but he prefers the honorable life of a farmer to that of becoming the slave of the people. Col. Nall will in a short time make a visit to Montgomery and the other counties of this Congressional district, when our people will have an opportunity of meeting with him and of forming a true estimate of the man.

For President, Wm. L. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson's address is an admirable second to the President's letter.

Mr. Cleveland's utterances have a directness and an earnestness, a rugged sincerity and a vigorous form which arouse the enthusiasm of the people.

Mr. Wilson speaks with something of the directness and force of Cleveland, and with an added finish and scholarly exactness which must command the admiration even of his enemies.

These two documents outline the Democratic campaign. It would be difficult to arrange in language more clear and concise than Mr. Wilson uses the Republican leaders and the Republican party.

Though some masqueraders in our own lines have betrayed us, the great enemy who has thwarted us has been the Republican party.

That a bonus of one-fifth of a cent to the Sugar Trust is an outrage we may all admit, but the McKinley bonus to this same Trust was half a cent, and that fully measures the difference between these two measures. Mr. Wilson is the coming leader of a rejuvenated Democracy. To-day he stands as Mr. Cleveland has stood since 1887, the logical leader of the Democracy in a national contest.

The Republicans, if they are in earnest, if they are courageous, if they are sincere will nominate McKinley and make his bill their platform.

That leaves Mr. Wilson the representative of the living issue, and his address yesterday the full and formal expression of the purposes of the Democratic party.—Lexington Post.

Just as We Expected.

Judge W. Beckner, Democratic candidate for Congress in this district for the short term, and John L. Bosley, Republican candidate, met at West Liberty last Monday.

Judge Beckner made a strong argumentative speech, which was well received, which was followed by Mr. Bosley, who indulged in personalities and for which he was bluntly roasted. Republicans must stick to their text, rooster tariff, force bill, trusts and combines. There is a war of the interests of the few against the many, and personal vituperations will not divert attention from the issue. Judge Beckner is a strong man, a good speaker, and Mr. Bosley is dealing with a buzz-saw when he attacks him. Beckner for the short term and Kendall for the long term will receive a majority each over their Republican opponents of 3,000 votes.

The Owens and Breckinridge committees are actively at work, meeting every evening.

Vicksburg is no longer a river town. Except in high water the boats are obliged to land nearly three miles below, and a railroad carries passengers and freight to the city.

What Congress Has Done.

It has made all money equally taxable.

It has restored confidence in our currency and finances.

It has given to all our people the opportunity of living cheaper and better.

It has shattered the protected trusts of McKinleyism.

It has placed the burden of taxation upon the rich man's surplus as well as upon every man's needs.

It has restored the freedom of elections.

It has placed the transactions of the Government and its methods of accounting upon a business basis.

It has recently reduced the expenditures of the Government.

For one solid year it has maintained an unrelenting fight against the trusts and monopolies which protection had created.

"It has fought the good fight, it has finished the course, it has kept the faith."

The Business Outlook.

From different sections comes the good news of a revival in business. North and South, East and West, the outlook has wonderfully brightened within the last few days. The starting up of manufacturing and merchandising is now apparent on every hand and a permanent revival of confidence is evident on us. The railroads are showing an increase in earnings and stocks are steady as a consequence. A dispatch from Birmingham states that an industrial revival of the most pronounced proportions has struck Alabama since the passage of the Tariff Bill and the settlement of the miners' strike. Furnaces that have been idle for a year are being "blown in" and the iron trade is reviving. More coal is being mined in the Birmingham district than at any time during the past twelve months. Reports from other business centers show substantial improvement during the past week. Merchants and manufacturers are withdrawing more money for increasing operations. Grain is moving freely. Imports have increased. Textile manufacturers report more orders. The outlook is for a brisk trade among iron men. More commercial paper is offered at the banks. In nearly every respect the prospect is encouraging.

Mr. John J. Anderson, one of the best known citizens of the county, is, we are sorry to learn, quite ill at his home. He is suffering from the effects of a gun shot wound accidentally received when quite a young man. After all these years the wound is causing him serious trouble and bringing not a little apprehension to his friends. To make matters worse his wife is quite sick at Olympian Springs, where she had gone in the hope of getting some relief from a trouble of long standing.

Mr. Albert Hoffman received a handsome gold-cameo medal from the New York Life Insurance Company. The medal is the more valuable to Mr. Hoffman than all the agents in New York and Kentucky computed for it. The New York Life also presented him with a handsome gold fountain pen.

Mrs. Jennie Cloud who lately moved from this city to Lexington has now located at 442 E. Main street. Miss Llewellyn who has so successfully filled a position in the Winchester Graded School is now in charge of school at Newtown in Scott county. Miss Llewellyn is one of the most popular and successful educators in this entire section.

The St. Louis bridge has a center span of 250 feet, the side spans being 500 each. It cost, including the railroad tunnel, $10,000,000. The Merchants' bridge is 2,400 feet long and cost $6,000,000.

Old Springfield Church.

The exercises to be held at Springfield church, Sept. 12th, will be of interest to Christians of every name and faith, as the celebration of the one hundredth birthday of the oldest church in this immediate part of the State. Eleven years after Rev. David Rice, the pioneer Presbyterian minister in Kentucky, crossed the mountains of Virginia in 1783; eight years after the Presbytery of Transylvania held its first meeting at Danville, Oct. 17, 1786—in the fall of 1794, the church of Springfield was organized. The pastor and organizer was Rev. Joseph P. Howe, who with his family emigrated from South Carolina, bringing all their worldly possessions on pack horses, probably during the summer immediately preceding the organization, as the first record we have of him is "settling with his wife, Rebecca, and child, Malinda, at Esq. William Robinson's, one-fourth of a mile north of Springfield, in the summer of '94.

Mr. Howe's call to the pastorate of the church was signed by William Robinson, James McClure, William and Rebecca Moffett and "perhaps James Trimble," the last named being the first elder of the church. The lot for the church and burying ground was given by William Robinson, and the present church built in 1821, of brick burned near the spot. There had been two buildings previous to this time, of what style and material we are not informed, but probably very rude and primitive. We could ascertain how long the graveyard has been used, but just back of the church there is a grave, the gray headstone of which bears the date 1802.

Mr. Howe continued to preach at Springfield until his death in July, 1827. He and his wife are buried on the south side of the church and their graves enclosed by a pyramid stone slab covered with a slab on which are cut appropriate inscriptions. Mr. Howe was succeeded by the Rev. Dewey Whitely, who was the pastor until 1832; his successor was Rev. Solomon G. Ward, who served the church about two years and was followed by Rev. David Todd, who preached until 1839. Rev. R. F. Cartwright then became the pastor and continued in that office until Dec. 1854. He is the only one of these ministers now living. In 1864, Mr. William George, a student at Daviess Theological Seminary was called, and the following fall, after his graduation, was ordained and installed pastor.

This brings the record to the sixties and within the recollection of many of our citizens.

The good that has been done by this old church, during the one hundred years of its existence, is beyond human power to calculate. It was for many years more largely attended than any other place of worship in this part of the country. At least two ministers have come out from its congregation, the successful evangelist, Rev. E. O. Guernsey and, the late Rev. W. H. Hill, D. D., for many years editor of the Presbyterian Herald, and Principal of Bellevue Seminary.

And while the old church, having suffered much from decay and removal, has become comparatively feeble in her latter days, scattered through Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and probably other States, are many of her children who shall, in the words of Holy Writ, "rise up and call her blessed"—Bath County World.

On Saturday Aug. 25, at the home of the bride's mother near this city, Mrs. Hiram Whitson, Rev. Richard French, of Winchester officiating Miss Margaret Whitson was married to Mr. D. Bruce Sey, of Kanawha Falls, W. Va. This wedding was a little remarkable. Miss Whitson had answered a marriage paper "Correspondent wanted." She met him only Thursday before their wedding and we are glad to say that those who know him say he is a nice gentleman and a good business man.

Stock and Crop.

D. L. Smith sold to J. D. Reid 7 head of feeders, good ones, at 3¢ cents, average 1150 pounds.

George Denton bought of B. F. Jeffries a nice lot of feeders, 10 head, at 3¢ cents that averaged 1108 pounds.

Wm. Bush shipped for Goldsmith on Thursday nine car loads (151) of cattle, bought in the county at 4¢ cents. Average, 1500 pounds.

Now that the fat cattle are being thinned out, the demand for feeders is becoming quite brisk and buyers are showing a disposition to pay a fair price for good stock.

Wm. Bush bought (for Goldsmith) of W. L. Hampton, of Clark county, on Thursday, 49 head of shippers; 40 head at 4¢ cents, balance at 4¢. An extra lot. Average, 1600 pounds.

John McDonald sold through the Bodmen warehouse, of Cincinnati, Clayton Howell, agent, his large crop of tobacco so as to net him 84 cents all round at home. The best offer Mr. McDonald had been able to secure for this tobacco was 8 cents for the two higher grades and 4 cents for the inferior grades. Mr. Howell is in the market with money and will make liberal advancements on the coming crop. Mr. Howell will give his personal attention to all crops sent to his house through him, and as he has never failed yet to make money for those who entrusted their interests to him, suppose you investigate what he can do for you.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

Sales on our market for the week just closed, amount to 3,045 hds., with receipts for the same period, 2,480 hds. Sales on our market since January 1st, amount to 117,934 hds. Sales of the crop of 1893 on our market to this date amount 117,358 hds.

Our market this week has been irregular and somewhat easier on the common and medium grades of burley leaf, so doubt the result of the recent rains which extended over the greater part of the tobacco belt. The fine grades remained active at the high prices which have been current far some time past.

The following quotations fairly represent our market for burley tobacco. (1893 crop.)

Trash. (Dark or damaged tobacco) $2.50 to $3.50.
Common colory trash, $4.00 to $5.00.
Medium to good colory trash, $5.00 to $6.00.
Common lugs, not colory, $4.50 to $5.50.
Common colory lugs, $5.50 to $6.50.
Medium to good colory lugs, $6.50 to $10.00.
Common to medium leaf $9.00 to $12.00.
Medium to good leaf, $12.50 to $16.00.
Good to fine leaf, $16 to $18.
Select wrappry leaf, $18 to $25.50.

Lost.

A small leather purse of gold coins. Description of same and reward by B. W. TRIMBLE.

Dr. W. C. Shankland died at his home, on Queen street, on last Friday, August 31, of consumption, aged 36 years. His funeral was preached Saturday at the Methodist church by Rev. A. Redd, assisted by Rev. Everette Gill and Elder H. D. Clark. Dr. Shankland moved to this city about eight years ago from Nicholas county, where he has lived ever since. He was a fine dentist and would have done well had not disease laid its hand on him early. He struggled hard against the death grip, but his life was too weak, and he yielded to the inevitable and on last Friday his spirit took its flight. He leaves a wife and little children to mourn his loss. He has been a member of the Methodist church for nearly twenty years and in his last hours manifested an abiding faith in his Savior, and waited with patience for the snapping of the cord when he would be at rest. "He was buried" with Masonic honors.

In another column will be found the advertisement of "Miss Chenault's School for Girls," which opens to-morrow. The lady, who is at the head of this enterprise is a born teacher, comes of a race of the foremost educators in the State, and has a long and successful experience at her back that gives ample ground for promising our people the very best service obtainable in her profession. She has selected Mt. Sterling as the place to establish a school of a high order. She knows what she is capable of accomplishing, and she is willing to let her work speak for itself. She is therefore content to take only a small number of pupils the present year, knowing that later on she will have no difficulty in securing all she may want. Miss Chenault's school will open at Mrs. Addie Samuels, on Mayville street, temporarily, till she can look around and secure such property as she may desire for permanent quarters. The plan of the school is such that the number of pupils for each teacher will be so limited that individual wants will receive individual attention. Miss Chenault will charge you an amount sufficient to justify her in giving your child every advantage possible and then she will see that it has these advantages. We gladly welcome this excellent teacher to our midst.

Mrs. Polly Hart, aged 91 years, died at the home of her brother, James and John Hughes, near Owingsville, yesterday morning at 6 o'clock. She died on the anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Hart was twice married, first to Mr. Andrew Bogie, of Madison county. As the fruit of this marriage, there were born to her a son and daughter, both of whom preceded her to their long home. After the death of Mr. Bogie she married Thomas Hart, who was a well known and successful teacher, near Judy, in this county. Mrs. Hart was an aunt to Mr. Robert Hazelrigg, of this city, and grandmother to James E. Bogie, of this county. The interment will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the family burying ground near the place she ended her days.

The First Presbyterian church is arranging to improve the music at their services. Prof. Fogg is drilling the orchestra and playing with them Sunday evenings. They have also secured Miss Olive Campbell to assist in the singing. The public are cordially invited to these services.

Jesse D. Tipton, who came to this county last spring from Estill county, and who has been living on the J. W. Chenault farm, died on Monday, aged 75 years. Burial will take place at the Tipton burial grounds to-day at 10 o'clock, with Masonic honors. Mr. Tipton was a good citizen, highly respected. His wife preceded him about four months.

Gen. Gordon is booked to deliver his lecture "The last days of the Confederacy" at this place on September 17.

A YEAR TODAY.

"I said him nay
A year today,
She sighed, the while from trembling labors
Two diamonds fell like diamond flashes
As he looked in adoration
Afar off from the jocular ring
Of dancers, in her festive dress
She dropped, her plaining
"Oh, foolish thing
Of child's vanity to be
Replaying love and hate
That proud girl, in maiden pride,
Perched that she might hold me lightly,
That he, because at once—though rightly—
"My heart has been
"To meet his own!"
"She said me nay
A year today."
"Oh, staid, then from his pipe the sahes
In sudden passion pain he dashes
And rises, pulling at the stress
Of underdresses, the love across
His will will never reason can express
"Oh, foolish thing
It knows no waiting
The fervent fondness, far and wide
I'll follow her, I'll seek her side
I'll woo her, woo her for my life,
He murmurs restlessly, brightly,
"All in my faithful breast, pressed tightly,
She says me nay,
And bids me wait."
—New York Advertiser.

The Eyes.

The eyeball should be a clear, bluish white color. If it has red streaks in it, there is trouble somewhere. If it is dull and yellowish color, that also is an indication of disease. And in most cases the seat of the trouble is not in the eye itself, nor the cure in eye washes. The stomach, which is accountable for most things, is generally accountable for the bright or lack luster condition of the eyes. To make dull eyes shine therefore the best thing is an antiseptic medicine.
One symptom of sick headache is the dancing before the eyes of innumerable specks. The proper treatment for this is to use eye powder and a darkened room. Darkness is the best possible thing for eyes that have much work to do, and merely to close them for five minutes at a time produces a rested feeling which shows itself in their renewed brightness. Bathing tired eyes in water as hot as can be borne and then closing them for some time is an excellent daily practice. But absolutely nothing but water should ever be allowed to touch the eyes except by the direction of an oculist.—New York World.

Daniel O'Connell.

After a dinner at Lord Duncannon's (Lady Morgan writes in her diary) I met the remarkable Dan O'Connell. Dan is not brilliant in private life, not overagreeable. He is mild, silent, unassuming, apparently absorbed and an utter stranger to the give and take charm of good society. I said so to Lord Clanciarde, who replied: "If you know how I found him this morning! His hair, the very top of his head, crowded with his curls. He had a word or a written order for each, then hurried off to the law courts, thence to the Improvement society and was the first gone here today. Two hours before he was making that clever but violent speech to Mr. la Touche, and now no wonder that he looks like an extinct volcano."

He Got the Shilling.

There is a story told of an English squire who, on his way home one night, dropped by accident down the window sash a shilling (which he held loosely in his hand ready for a certain tollgate). Arrived home, he gave his coachman instructions to recover the lost shilling, and if he could not manage to do this himself he must call in the aid of the carpenter. The next day, while sitting with his family at luncheon, the shilling was brought in from the stables. The country squire made pleasant triumph of his chitiness, but his countenance fell some few weeks later when the carpenter's bill displayed the detail, "For removing carriage window, etc., and getting out shilling dropped, 5 shillings."—London News.

Snake Motion.

The vertebrae of snakes are fitted together with a sort of ball and socket articulation, which, however, is capable of motion only from side to side. A snake moves by propelling himself on the points of the scales which, to him, answer the purpose of ribs. A snake does not climb a tree or bush by coiling around it, but by holding on with the points of its scales. A snake on a pane of plate glass is almost helpless.—Exchange.

A HUMILIATED YOUTH.

He wasn't Foster in English Customs and Dressed in Borrowed Finery.
Americans are rather inclined to adopt whatever pleases their fancy in the way of insignia, coats, etc., without recognizing the fact that it is an unwritten law in Europe that only certain persons can use particular combinations or devices. From them, with a fine disregard of all time honored distinctions, before their footmen's coats, assume the livery of famous houses and wear themselves any conjunction of colors that they choose, not knowing or caring that they put themselves in the position of interlopers in the estimation of the initiated. Approaches of this peculiarity, a young American who has recently returned from Europe tells a good story on himself.
Seeing a quantity of attractive hat ribbons hanging up in a haberdashery's shop in London he purchased half a dozen, and later on, when he donned his straw hat at a dinner, he placed his sasher black band with one of the prettiest among his collection. He had hardly left his hotel, however, when a military looking man in the other side of the street crossed over, and after walking past him once or twice finally came to him with a pleasant nod. "I have been on the look out for you for years," he remarked cordially, "but I am always glad to see one of 'ours.'"
"Beg pardon," stammered the young dandy, but there must be some mistake.
"You are not in the 'guards'!" asked the old gentleman firmly. "Then pray, sir, where did you get that hat?" And looking daggers of unutterable scorn as his hero explained his nationality and ignorance he turned on his heel and strode contemptuously away, while the humiliated youth retreated to his lodgings and donned the quiet colors of an insignificant citizen. A few months later, however, while looking over his various trunks in Switzerland, he came across the bunch of nice looking ribbons, which it seemed a pity not to use.
"Over here I am certainly safe," he thought, and he again selected one of the pretty bands. Now, as no one took any notice of his colors he felt that he was safe all right. But one day at Lausanne a dapper looking little man marched up to him in the office of the hotel. "The Prince of Wales' Own, I presume?" he exclaimed intently, touching the band of his hat and looking over the young man suspiciously.
"Take my advice, young fellow," he continued, "when hearing the reiterated explanation, 'and don't dress yourself up in borrowed plumes, or people might think you a jackdaw.'"
"I guess I might as well wait until I get back to New York before trying any more of those ribbons," remarked our compatriot to himself, as he once more ruefully unstuck his hatband.—New York Tribune.

A Woman's Story.

The following extract from a letter written to a friend by Wilson, the ornithologist, gives a picture which should move the hearts even of those who never voluntarily think of their fondly loved birds.
"One of my boys caught a mouse in school and directly marched up to me with the prize. I set about drawing it the same evening, and all the while the beatings of its little heart showed it to be in the extreme agony of fear."
"I had intended to kill it in order to fix it in the claws of a stuffed owl, but happening to spill a few drops of water where it was tied it leaped it with such eagerness and looked in my face with such an eye of supplicating terror as perfectly overcame me. I immediately untied it and restored it to life and liberty."
"The agonies of a prisoner at the stake while the flames and instruments of torture are prepared could not be more severe than the sufferings of that poor mouse, and insignificant as the object was I felt at the moment the sweet sensation which money leaves on the mind when she triumphs over cruelty."—Youth's Companion.

Germany's Old Maple Tree.

One of the most curious trees in Germany stands the left bank of the river Oder, in Rastow, Silesia. It is a maple at least 100 years old, which has been twisted and cut into a sort of circular two storied house. A flight of steps leads up to the first level, where the branches have been gradually woven together so that they make a firm leafy floor. Above this is a second floor of smaller diameter formed in the same way, and the ends of the branches have been woven into solid walls and cut so that eight windows fill each of the apartments. Below the first floor, at the level of the second and at the top of the tree the boughs have been allowed to grow out naturally, while the intermediate walls and the edges of the windows openings are kept closely clipped.—Philadelphia Press.

The Truly Great.

He only is great of heart who floods the world with a great affection. He only is great of mind who stirs the world with great thoughts. He only is great of will who does something to shape the world to a great career, and he is greatest who does the most of all these things and does them best.—R. D. Hitchcock.

Hypodermic Injections.

Hypodermic injection was discovered by Majendie. Morphine is perhaps the most familiar drug so used. But the variety of drugs is very great, and there are numerous cases in which life would certainly be lost if there was no way of medicating the patient except through the mouth.—Popular Magazine.

A LURE FOR MARKSMEN.

The Deceptive Swinging Egg of This Glass Ball Target.
A shooting gallery peculiarity that has recently come into popularity consists in a very light and fragile ball of blown glass, or in some cases a hollow eggshell suspended from a string. This always attracts the inexperience of marksmen, because the natural destructiveness inherent in human nature causes him to prefer to shoot at something which he can smash rather than at a target that goes to harm from the accuracy. Therefore he wastes his three shots at 14 cents a shot, not on the targets, but on the suspended mark. And he never hits it.

The experienced man in rifle range gunnery wastes no time on the delectable ball. He knows that it can't be hit. Probably he knows it from experience, for it is one of those facts that no man will believe until he has tried it for himself. The reason for it is that a very light hollow glass ball or a blown egg, if properly hung on a slender string, will dodge any bullet that ever came from a gun barrel. The air that the bullet piles up in front of it blows the light mark out of the projectile's path until it has passed, after which the target swings back to its original position. This is very provoking for the marksmen, who if he is a good shot, he the doubtful satisfaction of seeing his target execute three quick dodges at the aforementioned price of 14 cents per dodge.

There is nothing, however, so remunerative to the proprietor as these pendent marks, for the gunners, provoked at their lack of success, will keep on and on and on trying to hit a mark to which a pinhead would give it up in disgust when the cost begins to tell upon them. The more a wise friend explains their lack of success. Two dollars is a cheap price to pay for the knowledge that one of these hanging targets is a better mark for a baseball than for a bullet.—New York Sun.

Marked and Hooked.

Up in the Sierra Anchos mountains of Gila county there are plenty of bears, great big bears, as big as 4-year-old steers, and with claws as cleaver in the snow. There are not many people in the Sierra Anchos, though some years in the month of May a few people go up among the pines to plant potatoes.

"Yo see, I was a-goin over the saddle near Mount Lookout, not notion like, and all of a sudden I heard ahead of me a kind of a sound like a horse was started. And right after before my eyes was the biggest, woodiest bear I ever seed in my born days. We hee about as fast as we could the cabin I built that year over near the head of Coon creek. Well, I was skeered clean out of my boots, and the bear appeared to wonder what I was doin countryn that trail. Well, we surveyed each other for a few minutes, when I stepped off politely to one side into the timber, and the bear went off down the trail.

"Why," exclaimed the tenderfoot, "didn't you have a gun?"
"Why, of course. Never stir out without my old Winchester 45."
"Why didn't you shoot him, then?"
"Good Lord, youngster, do I look like a blame fool? I hadn't lost no bar. Bar's all right, only you just let him alone when you meet him on the trail, and he'll return the compliment."

"Nobody shoots bears in that country. Bear and human live together with mutual respect, if not amity, and neither side cares to break the truce."—Phoenix Gazette.

Teophilic Gaster.

In spite of his exceptional strength and the magnitude of his desires, Gaster was a dreamer, strayed into the midst of a restless, implacable civilization which rushed past him and over him and trod him under foot, while he, unconscious of the fact, made no complaint. "Poor Theo" he sometimes exclaimed, and he, his friends, knew what depths of unspoken suffering were compressed into that cry. He lived in a world of dreams far away, so far away indeed that he was aware the fantastic existence he had imagined was not to be realized upon our earth and therefore made the best of the indifferent circumstances in which he was forced to live.—"Literary Recollections," Maxime du Camp.

The Fata Morgana.

The most singular aerial phenomenon is the fata morgana, a sea mirage seen off the coast of Calabria and between Italy and Sicily. It represents the phantoms of cities, houses, temples, palaces and ships, sometimes in their proper position, sometimes inverted, occasionally at an angle. The phenomenon has been known for many ages and formerly considered great and widespread alarm, being regarded as an evil omen that foretold some general and severe calamity.—Exchange.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osborn, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Bourbon county Fair this week. Begins to-day at Paris. This is one of the oldest and best fairs in the state. Our country will be well represented.

In the 2-year-old stake at Lexington there were five starters. The King Wilkes filly Keltons, won in 2:21; 2:21, good time indeed for youngster of that age.

It is noticeable that out of 11 colts and fillies which won place and money in the three furlongs during the Terre Haute meeting, nine were of Wilkes blood.

Pamlico, 2:10. One of the best race horses ever seen in the turf, died at Hartford last week of lung fever. He was owned by Batchelor and Spurr they had refused $25,000 for him this season.

Nancy Hanks' record of 2:04 is the bull's eye at which the sportsman archers are shooting, and there are dents in the target close to it. The dangerous rivals are Alfa 2:05, Directum 2:05 and Fantasy 2:07.

The money was well divided at Chicago last week. The Village Farm won $10,450, Monroe Salisbury $9,750, Budd Dobie $3,750, M. E. Melleney $2,100, J. Goldsmith $1,950, F. S. Gordon $1,750, Douglas Thomas $1,350, etc.

Hickok has issued a challenge in which he offers to trot Directum, 2:05, a race against Alfa, 2:05, for any amount not less than $2,500 or more than $10,000 a side, over either, the Chicago, New York or Boston track, any time during the month of September, barring the week on which the New England Breeders' meeting is held.

Crit Davis was largely responsible for the defeat of Cobwebs in the 2:15 class at Rochester. The erratic Dandy Jim was formerly in his stable and he knew his peculiarities. His present tutor had been trying to get him in condition to carry his speed by leading him behind a sulky. He was afraid to drive him on the track, as he fretted and tried to run away. Davis advised that he be driven on the road, as was the custom at Harrodsburg.

The suggestion was acted upon, and the grey gelding went quietly there. He would jog along with the reins loose on his back. Constant road work put him in condition, and Cobwebs went down before his first rushes of speed. Crit Davis took care of Dandy Jim in the race, and he and his immediate friends won handsome money on him. Davis has returned to Kentucky with his stable. He will labor to build his horses for the fall campaign—Turf, Field and Farm.

The yearling colt Abbell, by Advertiser, 2:15, out of Beautiful Belle, 2:29, has reduced his record to 2:20 and he not only holds the race-record for trotting yearlings, but he is also a taster trying than his famous dam produced to the cover of Electioneer. It is possible that Advertiser might have proven a better sire had his dam been by thoroughbred Planet instead of George Wilkes, but some say Palo Alto, who was bred that way, failed to sire a foal that trotted in 2:30 as a yearling, although he was mated with Beautiful Belle once, the fact resulting being now two years old. The thoroughbred blood that is pushing the winners to the front with the most success this year is found in the pedigrees of horses who have two or three generations of good trotting blood before the blood of the sire is reached. And what is more, the father back that blood is in the pedigree the better the possessor of it seems to be.

BABY HAD THREE TEETH.

But In Proving This To Father Nearly Caused a Domestic Separation.

He is very prominent in business circles and a very busy man, but he finds time occasionally to get acquainted with his clerks, and even chats with them some time. One of his bright young men, finding him self favored with a few words from the boss the other day, sought to make the most of the opportunity by introducing domestic affairs.

Now, the most important fact in the bright young man's domestic affairs just now is a new baby, and this baby was hatched into the world with the boss, and the important information imparted by the fond father that the little one had three teeth.

"How old did you say it was?" asked the employer, assuming great interest in the case.

"Five months," he was the reply.

"Oh, come, now, Ed. That won't do. Five-month-old babies don't have teeth. You must be mistaken about the age."

"No, I'm not, sir. I guess I ought to know."

Then followed an animated conversation in which the employer endeavored to impress upon the employee that it was an utter impossibility for a five-month-old child to have three teeth, while the fond young father insisted that it was his child and he ought to know. The controversy concluded by the employer dismissing the subject with the remark, "You may be right about the child's age, but you must be wrong about the teeth."

Having thus indulged in a little sociability the employer thought no more of the matter. Not so the fond father. He didn't feel good over what had passed, especially as number of his fellow employees had heard the debate. On going home at the close of his day's work he told his wife of the discussion, and she, like the fretful porcupine, had all quilts set instantly. "I'll prove it to him," she muttered that night just before going to sleep. Next day the big business man's wife called on him with a lady friend, and the two ladies were sitting in the private office chatting with the big business man when the office boy announced:

"A lady with a baby to see you, sir."

Before anything could be said she walked right in, and without noticing the ladies she said:

"Here's my baby, Mr. Blank. I'm its mother, and I know it is just 5 months and 3 days old."

Then she grabbed the astonished man's hand, and thrusting one finger into the infant's mouth she continued: "Feel the teeth! There are three of 'em. So, there, now?"

He felt, and then it dawned upon him who she was and why she had brought her baby to his private office. But it was different with his aristocratic wife and her female friend. The former just gave a little scream and then started to faint. The latter said in a cold, hard voice:

"Be calm, Jane. Control yourself."

Then began an explanation, it being necessary to call in the baby's father to prove himself and testify to the controversy of the previous day. When the tangle was all untangled, the baby was made much of, but the big business man shivered all the rest of the day over his narrow escape from being the central figure in a great sensation.—St. Louis Republic.

General Grant and an Interview.

Chicago correspondent had an experience with the late Mayor Harrison several years ago. The mayor had given the information requested, and then getting confidential gave a great deal more of a much better interest. But he put the seal of secrecy on the newspaper man's lip regarding the unasked for information and added:

"If you give me away, I shall do what General Grant once threatened to do. Grant was on his way around the world. He was in the carriage with me riding in the parade in Chicago. During the ride we talked on politics, and he said some pretty sharp things about some Republican policy."

"General," I said, "suppose I should tell the newspapers what you have said to me. What would you do to square yourself with your Republican friends?"

"The general took his cigar from his mouth and in the most matter of fact way replied:

"I'd tell 'em I never said it."—New York Mail and Express.

Elton Pulls and Horse Fails.

If a lion and a strong horse were to pull in opposite directions the horse would pull the lion backward with comparative ease. But if the lion were hitched behind the horse and facing in the same direction, and were allowed to exert his strength in backing, he could easily pull the horse down upon his haunches or drag him across the ring, so much greater is his strength when he goes backward from the hind legs than in forward plying.—Chambers' Journal.
